AIR-COOLED.

Explorer Al Falfa was set for his great trip to the north pole. But when he arrived at his ship, and is ready to be hauled up, some darn critter shoots his mule with a bean shooter and causes him to run away. The whole thing and causes the explorer to be bumped around a bit and nearly misses his plane, but grabs it just in time.

Now they're off and everything is going fine. The old plane is functioning on all six mice, which acts as the engine. Here and there eager crouds are gathering below to wish them "Bum Voyage".

Then one day, away up north, they crash right through a Ice Mountain and disturb the peace of mind of a mountain Goat and he follows, jumping rapidly from precipice, finally lands upon the blimp and nearly bumps the Explorer right off. At last they succeed in kicking the intruding Goat off and he lands crashing thru a Eskimo house. This causes a whole gang of Eskimoes to rain arrows at the poor helpless Explorer. Then finally everything began to go wrong. The Explorer has a argument with the pilot Mac Millian Cat. So Mac walks right out on him, he grabs a boat, calls all the six mice, which were propelling the Blimp---and they just row away into the air. Of course it must have been an air boat.

When the Blooming B limp stops and the Explorer realizes the condition, he throws out an anchor. The anchor crashes right on a walrus 's head and when the Explorer comes sliding down the rope, the walrus gives him a boost that sends him back to the Blimp so fast, it causes it to explode and the poor Explorer falls down and down with a crash; on the peak of a mountain, then slides down and down again. Half way down he bumps into a Black Bear fishing, and he carries him right along. Two miles farther down they all crash into a croud of polar bears and they all crash through the ice.

It happens that Mac Millian Cat had not been doing well either so he and his boat come gliding right down into the same whale in the ice. The bears climb out and chase them for the next eight days.

AESOP says:

"It is better to try to do something and fail, then try to do nothing and succeed."
